Some History Behind The Day

August 27, 1776 (the day Maryland saved America)

On August 27, 1776, a mere 6 weeks after signing the Declaration of Independence, George Washington and the Continental Army were engaged in the Battle of Brooklyn. The Americans were greatly outnumbered 13,000 troops to 34,000 troops as King George and General Howe wanted a swift and embarrassing end to the Colonist's rebellion. Britain had sent one of the largest armadas in history, more than 450 ships with an additional 10,000 men, to New York Harbor with the aim of destroying Washington and his rebel army.

During the battle, the Continental Army was surrounded in Brooklyn Heights, backed up against the East River. Knowing the entire revolution was at risk, Washington made the command decision to evacuate the army across the river to the safety of lower Manhattan.

But they needed time. They needed someone to cover their retreat.

General William Alexander, known as Lord Stirling, delivered the plan of retreat to commanding officer Major Mordecai Gist, in what was surely a suicide mission.

Covering the retreat would be infantry lines from Delaware, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. Positioned near the Vechte-Cortelyou House – an old Dutch farmhouse held by the British – estimates had these men outnumbered 5:1 with inferior artillery. They were to hold off the British as long as they could and allow Washington to move the rest of the Continental Army across the river into Manhattan.

These men accepted their fate, and Lord Stirling remained with them to fight.

As the fighting advanced, the Pennsylvania and Delaware lines collapsed, leaving Maryland to take the final stand. The Maryland 400 – as they came to be known – actually numbered around 270 and faced nearly 2,000 British soldiers. Stirling and Gist regrouped the men and commanded they fight through the chaos.

Outnumbered nearly 10-1, the Maryland regiment advanced six times against the British that day, marking one of the bloodiest battles of the American Revolution.

Stirling and Gist fought beside their men until they were finally overrun. Stirling was captured by Hessians while Gist was able to escape with roughly a dozen others back behind Continental lines.

256 Maryland patriots were lost in the stand, but they held the line long enough for Washington to successfully retreat to Manhattan. It is said that Washington could see the battle from a spyglass and remarked "Good God! What brave fellows I must lose this day!"

The sacrifice of the Maryland 400 is how our state became known as the "Old Line State" in memory of those who felt that the idea of a free America was worthy of death.

This sacrifice is one of the most significant moments during the fight for our nation. Without holding the line, the Continental Army would have been destroyed and the Revolution lost. Historian Thomas Field referred to Maryland's holding the line as, "an hour more precious to American liberty than any other."

NOTICE TO RETAILERS

If wine and/or distilled spirits have been delivered to a retail licensee by a wholesaler or manufacturer on or before the PURCHASE DATE indicated in Column I, and payment is not received by the wholesaler on or before the corresponding DUE DATE listed in Column II, then the retailer is considered by state regulation to be overdue. Retailers can avoid most problems associated with late mail deliveries by mailing remittances at least five (5) days before the specified DUE DATES.

Regulation 03.02.01.04 requires Maryland wholesalers and manufacturers who sell wine and distilled spirits to retailers to (1) report the retailer to the Regulatory and Licensing Section for late payment (even if payment was received after the due date) and (2) simultaneously notify the retailer that a report has been submitted to the Regulatory and Licensing Section. Reports and notifications must be made for all late payments. The Regulatory and Licensing Section will determine whether or not the retailer is placed on the credit control list.

DISTILLERIES ARE INNOVATING TO SAVE WATER IN DROUGHT-STRICKEN AREAS

FROM REPURPOSING WASTEWATER FOR FISHERIES TO IMPLEMENTING CLOSED-LOOP RECYCLING SYSTEMS, WATER-GUZZLING U.S. DISTILLERIES ARE GETTING CREATIVE TO CONSERVE WATER

BY NICKOLAUS HINES

Water sustainability was not top of mind for Al Laws when he was starting Laws Whiskey House in Denver. That quickly changed after he watched a constant stream of cold tap water run over his still's condenser and then flow straight down the drain.

"I thought, 'This has got to stop,'" says Laws. "We need to have investment so we don't do that anymore. We want to track every gallon from its input to its output."

Water is the key to distilling—and distilling traditionally uses a lot of water for fermentation, proofing, and especially cooling. The group of alcohol industry leaders in the Beverage Industry Environmental Roundtable (BIER) found that, on average, distilleries use about 37 liters of water to produce one liter of spirit—around 10 times the amounts used for beer (3.5 liters of water) and wine (four liters of water).

Diverting the water used to cool a still's condenser into a closed-loop system is the first way that Laws moved toward water sustainability. He's far from alone. Cooling is the biggest water use culprit in distilling, though it's also one area with an established fix—closed-loop systems that recycle and re-cool the water instead of draining it can be found around the world. That same BIER report outlined that this can bring water use down to about 11 liters of water for every liter of liquor produced.

That's a sizable amount of water, especially in the dry West where climate change is exacerbating a severe drought. Reservoirs are running low, annual rainfall is lower on average, and extended hot conditions dry up the moisture that does fall.

This impacts every facet of life, including distilling. Today, distillers across the country are rethinking their approach to water management, from how much water goes in, to the quality of the wastewater coming out.

A DRY CALIFORNIA LOOKS FOR SOLUTIONS

"The big question with water is who gets what, and if you have a big population in one location, does that mean they can take water from other locations, which is what we're doing now," says Ryan Friesen, the head distiller at Blinking Owl Distillery in Santa Ana, California, and the vice president of the California Artisanal Distillers Guild. "Is it sustainable? Not as long as California stays in a 100-year drought for more than 10 years in a row. So we have to get better at controlling the water we do use."

Blinking Owl is in a rare position in California. Orange County, where the distillery is located, has one of the largest groundwater reclamation systems in the world. This allows Blinking Owl to rely on its local municipal system to provide a sustainable option. Friesen notes that water conservation is a problem that will require both municipal and industry solutions. On the distillery side, Blinking Owl uses a 10,000-gallon closed-loop cooling system.

"There's always a cost though, and the cost for us is the electricity to do the cooling," says Friesen. "But at least the electricity you can get from sustainable resources when available."

Another small way that California distillers are bringing alternative sources of clean water into the bottle is through proofing. Hangar One in Alameda, California, uses fog catchers to turn the Bay Area's famous fog into fresh water, which the company describes as "an articulation of our commitment to preserving the fragile ecology of our home state." Rod & Hammer's SLO Stills in San Luis Obispo uses desalinated Pacific Ocean water sourced from a plant in nearby Santa Barbara. These are small inputs from a big picture perspective, but also serve to bring awareness to the stressed resource's role in drinks.

Still, even in a state where water shortages are so highly publicized, water conservation and treatment isn't always the number one priority.

TimberFish Technologies' wastewater-powered fishery.

"New technology is expensive, and most start-up distilleries don't have money to burn," says Friesen. Yet with the current progression of water scarcity, he adds, distilleries will be forced to adopt new technologies.

"I think we're going to get to a point where you don't open a distillery in a location because of the water issues there, or because of the waste stream," says Friesen. "I think that has to become part of the everyday conversation."

WATER CONSERVATION AT THE SOURCE

A wide swath of the Southwest relies on snowmelt from mountains in Colorado, but sources are strained. The overstretched Colorado River, for example, feeds the Glen Canyon Dam hydroelectric facility on Lake Powell, which provides a portion of the power to about five million people in six states. The Bureau of Reclamation gives a 34 percent chance that the water level will fall below the necessary 3,490 feet to run the dam by 2026.

Lake Mead, also fed by the Colorado River, provides water for at least 40 million people throughout seven states and Mexico. It dropped to just 35 percent capacity in 2021, prompting deep water supply cuts in Nevada, Arizona, and Mexico.

"In Colorado, and all the West, water is our most precious resource," says Connie Baker, the cofounder, CEO, and head distiller at Marble Distilling in Carbondale, Colorado.

Marble Distilling partnered with Siemens and the controls contractor Holbrook Services for its groundbreaking Water Energy Thermal System (WETS) that repurposes and recycles water for both the distillery and its attached hotel, The Distillery Inn. The hot water from the distilling process is pumped to other parts of the building for things like domestic hot water and heating, which leaves cool water that's used to cool the mash and the condenser. Excess heat is used for snowmelt in the winter, while excess cold water is used for temperature control in the distillery and the on-site guest suites.

This continuous closed-loop process is sustainable from both a water and energy perspective. Marble Distilling saves more than four million gallons of water a year with WETS while also capturing 1.8 billion BTUs of energy—enough to power 20 homes.

PARTNERSHIPS TURN WASTEWATER INTO A RESOURCE

Distillery wastewater, called stillage, has a low pH, high salinity, and a high concentration of nitrogen, phosphorus, and other organic materials. When dumped in rivers and streams, it can inhibit photosynthesis and reduce the oxygen in water, which kills aquatic plants and animals. A study by researchers in Poland notes that some countries allow distilleries to thicken wastewater and spread it over fields like a fertilizer, but the nitrogen content is so high that it can end up being a soil pollutant.

For this reason, most distillers pay to have it dumped or shipped off to be disposed of elsewhere. Some, however, are experimenting with ways to turn wastewater into a resource.

Five & 20 in Westfield, New York, partnered with TimberFish Technologies to use wastewater for a fishery. Rather than paying to dispose of stillage, Five & 20 uses it as part of a sustainable side business that creates its own income. The nitrogen- and phosphorus-rich wastewater is pumped to tanks to feed microbes. The microbes clean the water and serve as food for small invertebrates, which in turn are eaten by fish. The pilot system at Five & 20 has grown populations of rainbow trout, channel catfish, yellow perch, largemouth bass, and freshwater shrimp.

"The water crisis will only get worse, and unless all act now, at any level, climate change will only accelerate."

– Connie Baker, Marble Distilling

It's not the only distillery at the forefront of testing new systems outside of the liquor industry for wastewater treatment.

Laws Whiskey House partnered with South Platte Renew in a pilot water cleaning program that uses microbes to metabolize carbon and turn nitrate to nitrogen gas. Laws Whiskey House provides the carbon-rich stillage for the program, which, when scaled up, could reduce the water treatment center's chemical dependency and provide a way for other businesses to reduce their carbon footprint.

"We looked at [the stillage] and thought there's so much here, we can't just throw it out," says Laws.

Part of the problem is that there's not yet a clear and obvious way of handling wastewater for cash-strapped, small distilleries. According to Laws, the company has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to separate its waste streams and divert them to where they can be made useful.

"Most distillers are pretty small and don't have the technical expertise, nor do they want to spend dollars on it," Laws says. "They say, 'Oh just separate the solids and put the liquids down the drain and pay your fees.'"

Yet by looking at ways to both reduce the amount of water that's used and to repurpose water that's typically dumped, distillers are staying at the forefront of water management.

"The water crisis will only get worse, and unless all act now, at any level, climate change will only accelerate," says Baker, of Marble Distilling. "None of us want to stop doing what we love, but we will have to adjust how we do it." ■

LOOKING FOR LOW CARBON WINE SHIPPING? TRY SAIL FREIGHT

GRAIN DE SAIL IS THE FIRST COMMERCIAL EXPORTER OF WINE BY SAIL SHIP, OFFERING A VIABLE—AND SCALABLE—ALTERNATIVE TO CONVENTIONAL CARGO

BY TYLER WETHERALL

In May, Grain de Sail, an 80-foot steel-hulled schooner, arrived in Brooklyn Marina with a French flag flying against its white sails and its hull packed with 18,000 bottles of organic and biodynamic wine.

Shepherded by a four-person crew through stormy seas, the wine had traveled for 25 days across the Atlantic from Brittany, France, in a temperature-controlled cellar on board, to be distributed across New York. Each bottle proudly bore a sticker: "Shipped by cargo sailboat."

Grain de Sail Wines is the world's only commercial exporter of wine by sail freight. Its €2-million, custom-built merchant vessel exports wine from France into New York, and then heads south to the Dominican Republic to load up on cocoa and coffee for the return journey. Each three-month voyage uses just 150 liters of diesel fuel, while traditional cargo ships can burn upward of 200 tons per day.

> "If a company's not profitable, it's not sustainable."
> – Jacques Barreau, Grain de Sail

Unlike some other sail freight ventures, which amount to curios or gimmicks intended to raise awareness of the viable alternatives to traditional cargo freight, Grain de Sail has proven financially viable; it reported €10 million in revenue in 2022 and continues to grow. It is in the process of adding a second much larger vessel, which will more than double its operations.

"It's not an experiment," says Jacques Barreau, who founded the company with his twin brother Olivier. "We want to show it's possible to bring in high volumes in a sustainable way. If a company's not profitable, it's not sustainable."

A RETRO-INNOVATION

The brothers have a background in renewable energy, and after developing maritime expertise while constructing offshore wind

MARYLAND

MARYLAND WINE IS...

GOOD FOR WINE LOVERS

Maryland's 85 wineries produce superb, handcrafted wines that compete with national brands, while highlighting all the benefits of buying local.

GOOD FOR AGRICULTURE

Maryland wineries support (and grow!) over 800 acres of grapes throughout the state. Grapes are a long-term crop, preserving open space and encouraging land preservation.

GOOD FOR TOURISM

Our industry attracts nearly 400,000 visitors annually to our wineries and wine festivals and events. These visitors spend their dollars at wineries, neighboring restaurants and accommodations.

GOOD FOR MARYLAND

Our wineries provide employment and tax revenue, supporting Maryland's rural economy by creating jobs that create tourism, preserve land and encourage agriculture. Maryland's wineries create 100 million in economic activity annually.

JOIN THE CONVERSATION

Facebook and Twitter @MDwine and be a part of the growth of great local wine industry.

DID YOU KNOW?

Did you know that only 3 out of every 100 bottles of wine sold in the state are bottles of Maryland wine. It's not a lot, but it's growing, and if you buy more local wine, you create more local jobs, grow more vineyards and help preserve our rural economy.

JOIN MARYLAND WINE MONTH

We're promoting stores and restaurants that support Maryland wine during Maryland Wine month in March.

turbines, they wanted to turn their attention to reducing the carbon footprint of the maritime transportation industry. Around 80 percent of global trade is transported across oceans on cargo vessels powered by fossil fuels, which accounts for around three percent of global greenhouse gas emissions. When it comes to the beverage industry, transport (by all modes) accounts for roughly four to five percent of the total carbon footprint of wines, according to a 2012 report from the Beverage Industry Environmental Roundtable (BIER).

"When you want to reduce the carbon footprint of maritime transportation, the best way to do it is to put sails on the mast," says Barreau. "It was done centuries ago; it's a retro-innovation, as we say at the company." Rather than add wind technology to a cargo ship, like many freight companies are doing in order to reduce its carbon footprint, Grain de Sail can operate with virtually zero emissions; even the navigational equipment is powered with solar panels.

The initial project, which launched in 2010, aimed to import organic cocoa and coffee beans from Central America and the Caribbean to France for production of chocolate and coffee in a factory in Brittany to be distributed locally, but the brothers realized the hull would be empty on the outbound journey, which was the genesis of Grain de Sail Wines. The idea was to fill the hull with a uniquely French product in order to "not waste any part of the journey," says Matthieu Riou, the company's wines and spirits director.

The 80-foot, aluminum, double-rigged boat was designed to maximize space in the hull to accommodate as many pallets as possible—1,500 cases per trip—and is insulated with foam to keep the wines between 15 and 18 degrees Celsius throughout the trip without the need for refrigeration. It set out on its first transatlantic crossing in 2020.

THE THREE PILLARS OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

When selecting the wines, Riou tends to work with winemakers that align with the company's values. "I love to work with the new wave of winemakers," says Riou. "Winemakers taking over the family vineyard and bringing a little modernity, still working in a traditional way, but bringing some new ideas."

In short, these are winemakers who are open to the proposal of radically reimagining their transportation. This includes: Mark and Martial Angeli of La Ferme de la Sansonnière in the Anjou region of the Loire Valley, biodynamic since its inception in 1990; Jean-Frédéric and Morgane Bistagne of Domaine des Maravilhas in the Rhône Valley, organic since 1992 and biodynamic since 2004; and Robert Eden of Château Maris in Languedoc, the first B Corp-certified winery in Europe.

Grain de Sail offers producers a reduction in carbon emissions of around 90 to 97 percent, as well as other pollutants like nox, sox, maritime noise, and cargo spillage. The company's values extend beyond the environment; Barreau founded the company on "three pillars of sustainable development," including: environmental, economic, and social. For example, the sailors are all on long-term contracts—a rarity in the industry—and no one earns more than two or three times the lowest paid employee.

Robert Eden, Château Maris

"We had been researching eco-friendly, low-carbon ways of transporting our wines to the U.S. for some time," says Eden. "When Grain de Sail came into existence, we immediately contacted them and requested to work with them." Château Maris was among the first producers to sign up for the then-untested venture in 2020. "We have always done things ahead of the curve. In order for change to happen, one must be willing to take risks and test new possibilities," adds Eden.

ENSURING PROFITABILITY—AND SCALABILITY

Currently, Grain de Sail predominantly works with producers by buying the wines directly and then handling all aspects of the importation, distribution, and sales in the U.S. When the second boat is complete, however, its cargo will increase to 180,000 bottles across two hulls, crossing four times a year, and it will act as a more traditional freight company.

"The cost per day of transportation is cheaper and the boat will go faster, due to the shape of the hull, so we'll generate more efficient cruising speed," says Barreau. "These two factors will reduce the final cost for shipping, and that's why it's possible to use it as a classical transportation system."

Shipping with Grain de Sail currently has a 26-day lead time to make the crossing and clear New Jersey customs, and it's three to four times more expensive than shipping with a conventional cargo ship. Riou is careful to find wines generally not otherwise available in New York; that way the price point increase on the final product due to the extra expense of sail freight isn't jarring for the buyer. The bigger ship will be only twice as expensive as conventional cargo and have a lead time of just 18 days. For some producers—and consumers—that price tag is worth it.

"In order for change to happen, one must be willing to take risks and test new possibilities..."

– Robert Eden, Château Maris

"It is currently more expensive to ship via sailboat, but this is partly due to economies of scale," says Eden. "They are building a larger boat, and this should help reduce the cost. As for inefficiencies, we have shipped twice with them and it has been very professional and the wine actually is distributed to our customers faster than when shipped via a traditional transatlantic cargo boat, as the smaller sailboats are not delayed as long in the harbor for shipping, unloading, and customs."

Right now, Château Maris ships around 10 percent of its product to the U.S. with Grain de Sail, but "no later than 2023, we would like to be shipping all our sales to the U.S. via sailboat, if not before," says Eden.

The plan, according to Barreau, is to keep growing the company, adding more boats, with the final goal to develop several locations around the Atlantic, potentially establishing a similar operation between the West Coast and Asia. "It's fully scalable," says Barreau. He admits, however, it would be hard to replicate the business model without the chocolate and coffee production, which right now comprises 90 percent of its profits.

"It's not easy, but there's an emergency today with the planet," says Barreau. "We have to do something now. And if we show the right example, I hope some other company will do the same." ■

EIGHT IS GREAT

In tandem with a colorful, outdoor-inspired packaging upgrade across its entire portfolio, ready-to-drink cocktail brand CANTEEN Spirits has curated two eight-can variety packs of its vodka sodas. The classic option brings together watermelon, black cherry, and lime, while the tropical option pairs the go-to lime with strawberry and pineapple.

SRP: $20.99 per eight-pack of 12-oz cans

PURE MEXICO

Wild-grown Arroqueño agave is the heart—and namesake—of Producer Mezcal's latest expression. Joining Tepeztate and Ensamble, which the small-batch Oaxacan brand released in 2021, Arroqueño's extremely limited production is overseen by mezcalero Juan Pachecho Santos. Split agave hearts, some of which grow on plants more than 17 years old, are roasted in a traditional oven, crushed with a tahona, fermented in cypress, and double distilled during a single pass through the still.

SRP: $156.99 per 750-ml bottle

PLANT POWER

A proprietary blend of hemp-derived CBD, botanical terpenes, and Reishi mushrooms comprise the backbone of Little Saints mocktails. These sugar-free, ready-to-drink beverages, the vision of environmental lawyer-turned-farmer and entrepreneur Megan Klein, are available in four varieties: Ginger Mule, Paloma, and the brand-new Mimosa and Spicy Margarita, naturally tinted by tree seeds and turmeric, respectively.

SRP: $5.99 per 8-oz can

LIGHT TOUCH

Following the 2020 launch of its RY3 Whiskey, blending house Phenomenal Spirits has rolled out RY3 14-year-old Single Barrel, Cask Strength Light Whiskey, aged in used or non-charred new American oak. A smooth, easy-drinking alternative to the more robust bourbon and rye, this 120-proof whiskey has a mash bill of 99 percent corn and one percent malted barley and is redolent of cinnamon, tobacco, orange peel, and hints of oak.

SRP: $79 to $85 per 750-ml bottle

FROM AMERICA'S HEARTLAND

Empirical, the Copenhagen-based flavor company founded by Noma alums Lars Williams and Mark Emil Hermansen, has now turned its attention to sorghum with SOKA. The brand's first spirit crafted in the U.S., it showcases the just-pressed juice of Wisconsin-grown sorghum cane and Kentucky sorghum cane syrup. Notes of fresh-cut grass, sorrel, and green Gala apple make SOKA ripe for cocktail experimentation.

SRP: $50 per 750-ml bottle
